Yes sir! Ladies and gentlemen, step right in the ole buggies, and kids, you hop on your velocipedes and all come out to the ball game on Decoration day.

Yes sir! Folks, you're sure to see one good game of ball that day. The lads from Aurora are plenty good.

Former Coach of Joliet High, Doug Mills, is their pitcher. This lad has plenty of smoke and can sure make the old ball talk. The team is reputed to be one of the best in the district.

But that does not daunt the Aces one bit, who say they would just as soon beat these lads as any other team which comes around the country.

Of course you know that Patty Homering is no slouch when it

Oratory, songs and music, waving of flags and placing of flowers and flags on the graves of soldiers is not all that constitutes Memorial Day.

It is a pity that in the present day of rotten politics and crooked politicians a spirit of indifference to the real meaning of Memorial Day is gaining ground and the high ideals of the forefathers are being relegated to oblivion.

Few people even care to know of the real meaning of the day. As it is, our easy going Americans are allowing foreign agitators to foster propaganda in our institutions of learning as well as in the ranks of labor which aims to undermine and destroy the very principles on which our nation is founded and for which its gallant defenders deemed no sacrifice too great.

Memorial Day is the time in which to instill in the minds of the oncoming generation the true significance of Memorial Day and why the heritage bequeathed to us by our forefathers must be upheld and preserved if this nation is to continue and to endure as the land of the Free and the Home of the Brave.

What we need badly today is less politicians and MORE PATRIOTS of the type that flourished in the days of Washington and Lincoln.

Let us make Americans America conscious.

Chicago Girl Scouts Visit Lincoln Estates

Last Saturday, the girls of the Lincoln Estates gathered at the home of Mrs. Kelly to welcome the Girl Scouts of Troop No. 25 from Chicago. They came out for the week end.

Following a hike they returned to Mrs. Kelly's home where they rummaged thru her rag bag and bedecked themselves comically for a barn dance, which went over big.

Cookies and punch were served and then came taps, but it was long after midnight before they rested in the arms of Morpheus, god of sleep.

Sunday morning, some of the girls attended mass and others worked and prepared dinner. The meals were cooked under the trees and served steaming hot under the orders of Miss Isabella. After dinner the girls had a 45 minute rest period, following which they roamed thru the woodland, picked flowers and studied birds, trees and nature.

Supper, consisting of toasted bread twists, pineapple jam, Scout's surprise punch and graham crackers, was enjoyed.

Scout Norma Rochaw couldn't sleep as she was cold. First aid was given with more blankets. First aid was also given to Scout Babe when she complained of a headache.

TINLEY WOMAN'S CLUB CLOSES FIRST YEAR

A most delightful way was chosen to close the Tinley Park Woman's Club year, Wednesday, when in the beautiful Midlothian Country Club, a luncheon was given.

Friends, neighboring club members and state and district officers were present, and with the Tinley Park club members, the attendance numbered seventy-five.

The luncheon was served at one o'clock in the spacious sun parlor, which was newly decorated in yellow, blue and red. On the tables were large bouquets of yellow and red tulips and blue lilacs. At each place was a buttonnaire of yellow daisies with a green tie and a program with a yellow paper cover, tied with a black silk cord and with a white narcissus, of paper, on the cover. The programs were clever work and were made by the Garden Circle who also decorated the tables.

Mrs. Henry Wyman offered the Blessings at the beginning of the serving. At the close of the luncheon, the out-going president, Mrs. Chas. Nielsen, gowned in yellow silk crepe with hat to match, presided at a short program.

In a few words, Mrs. Nielsen told of her joys in being president the past year, what it meant to her and extended her best wishes for the coming years of the club.

Mr. Fred Erickson of Tinley Park favored with a number of piano selections in his splendid versatile manner. As he played the music the assembly sang "Happy Birthday", as the club is just one year old.

Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Winstrand, accompanied by Miss Traub, all of Midlothian, sang two duets.

Mrs. Nielsen introduced the organizer of the club, Mrs. Wallace B. Combs, who is a long experienced club woman. Mrs. Combs spoke briefly telling of the fine work the Tinley Park Club has done this year and then she presented a lovely bouquet of pansies to Mrs. Nielsen.

In presenting them, she told of

Attend American Passion Play

Editor William Semmler and family, Rev. and Mrs. H. Schaeffer and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Deadmore, the latter two families, of Joliet, had the pleasure of seeing the famed American Passion Play at Bloomington, Illinois, last Saturday afternoon as guests of the American Passion Play Association.

This outstanding religious drama of the world, was presented at the Scottish Rite Temple in Bloomington, the players taking part in this great production being all residents of that city. About 250 persons took part.

The play covered the life of Christ, depicting all the high lights of his ministry and climaxed with his betrayal, trial, crucifixion and resurrection and ascension.

The play began at 1:30 p. m. and concluded at 5:30 p. m. without intermission. The presentation was superb and the scenes and lighting effects were gorgeous. After seeing this wonderful production, one cannot help but better understand the wonders and greatness of the life of Christ and a desire to live up to His principles and teachings. Everyone who possibly can do so, should attend this play next year which will open on Palm Sunday. This year marked the 12th season of the Play which closed last Sunday.

The Passion Play is dramatized, staged and produced by Delmar D. Darrah.

The Conquering Spirit

The true American spirit that will not be downed is what led us into those wars from which we came forth victors. Because everything has a price, and victory perhaps the greatest of all, we lost thousands of men who fought our cause. It is to them that we go Memorial Day bearing flowers of tribute. In honor of those men who have preserved our United States.

"A song for our Banner!" The watchword recall Which gave the Republic her station:
"United we stand, divided we fall!"
It made and preserved us a nation!

"The union of lakes, the union of lands,
The union of States none can sever,
The union of hearts, the union of hands,
And the Flag of our Union forever!"

Bedtime Story for Children

DANNY SHAKES MORE THAN EVER

DANNY MEADOW MOUSE was trapped. He was trapped, but not caught, which sounds rather mixed and isn't at all. You see he was trapped because Billy Mink was waiting for him just outside the only doorway to that hollow log in which he was hiding. But he wasn't caught because the doorway was too small for Billy Mink to get through and Billy couldn't reach him, despite all his efforts.

"You'll have to come out some time and I'm going to stay right here and wait for you," declared Billy Mink. "You may just as well come out now as to keep me waiting, because you are going to be caught anyway and I am going to catch you."

"You'll Have to Come Out Some Time and I'm Going to Stay Right Here and Wait for You," Declared Billy Mink.

Danny didn't say a word. He held his tongue, which was the wisest thing he could do. It usually is wise to hold one's tongue. But I suspect that it was fear more than wisdom which caused Danny to hold his tongue. You see, poor Danny was shaking all over with fear. He knew that for the time being he was safe, but he also felt sure that if Billy Mink kept his word and watched just outside that doorway he would either starve to death inside that hollow log or furnish Billy Mink a good meal.

Danny couldn't decide which end would be the worst and the more he thought it over the more he shivered and shook. Either end was dreadful. The fact is Danny Meadow Mouse was so frightened that he wasn't using his usually lively wits at all. It never once entered his head that if Billy Mink waited long enough for him to starve, Billy would himself be likely to starve, and that is something Billy would be the very last person in the Great World to do. Billy is altogether too active to be patient.

But Danny was too frightened to think of this and so he crouched shivering and shaking, as miserable a Meadow Mouse as ever lived. "I ought to have remembered Billy Mink's wonderful nose and that if he once found my trail he would follow me straight here," thought Danny. "I ought to have waded in the water after crossing the Laughing Brook and so broken my trail. I ought to have found a hiding place with more than one entrance. I ought—but what's the use of thinking the things I ought to have done and didn't do? There isn't any. There isn't any at all."

That was quite true. When it is too late there seldom is any use in thinking of what should or should not have been done. But because there seemed to him nothing else to think about, Danny Meadow Mouse continued to think about his mistakes and to shiver and shake with fear. And outside Billy Mink grinned and licked his lips and tried to think of some way to make Danny Meadow Mouse come out of that hollow log.

LOVE'S LAMPS

By ANNE CAMPBELL

MY LOVE that burned with just a single flame,
A chaste white taper lit for you alone,
In twenty years has spread itself to claim
A dozen conflagrations for its own.
It warms itself upon our children's lips,
And sends up signal fires our friends may see.
They come to us with glowing fingertips,
Warmed 'neath the roof that shelters you and me.

Sometimes I think of those dear selfish days
When you were all my world, my own blue sky;
But now our children bless me with your gaze;
A dozen lovely lamps are flaring high.
But like the constant star above the hill,
My love for you is burning brightly still.

Dental Hygiene

The Road to Health

By DR. R. ALLEN GRIFFITH

DIET, TEETH, EXERCISE

MOST people feel that the condition of their own mouths and the condition of their children's mouths is their own affair. We should get away from this selfish, erroneous and dangerous attitude. With every breath from an unclean mouth millions of pathogenic micro-organisms easily capable of inoculating another person with a disease-producing germ are expelled from one to ten feet.

To the healthy individual it really matters little how many pathogenic varieties of micro-organisms there may be, or how prevalent they are, because man possesses a natural immunity to infections and is normally immune.

If this were not true, man would have been exterminated from the earth long ago by the myriads of microscopic foes always surrounding him. But just let the individual reduce his natural bodily resistance below a certain point, through fatigue, overeating, loss of sleep, worry, etc., and "some little bug will get you" soon.

The chief concern, therefore, of both the individual and society at large should be to maintain this natural immunity instead of trying to discover cures or remedies for natural conditions that are sure to follow a lowering of the natural resistance to disease. Every disease germ that enters the human system must enter through the mouth, nose or a break in the skin (with the exception of venereal diseases), and it is estimated that 90 per cent of all disease enters through the mouth and incubates in the mouth.

Should not a clean, healthy mouth then be the first consideration in the prevention of disease?

During the present generation the physician has proved that there is a direct connection between unclean mouths and the rapid increase in kidney, heart and circulatory diseases, formerly attributed to deranged metabolism, but now known to be due to a constitutional poisoning of the system from bacteria and their toxins.

Sanitation and hygiene can change the mouth from one of the most infected and unhygienic parts of the body to one that is wholesome, disease-free and clean, and eliminate it as a plague spot for the entire system.

A clean mouth will prevent disease. A suitable diet will insure a well nourished organism. Exercise will insure proper elimination. These three things will insure health, happiness and longevity.

MALNUTRITION

MANY articles have recently appeared in the newspapers in regard to malnutrition in school children. Insufficient food is generally supposed to be the only cause. Just at present the depression is blamed. But this condition has existed for many years. Too little food or improper food is of the utmost importance, not only to the children, as children, but for their adult life as well.

Several years ago the American Open Air School Journal said that of 548,000 school children examined in fifteen cities in the United States, about 4,000 were undernourished. It would seem that the various school boards or state governments, as a matter of political economy, as well as human mercy, would find some means to supply adequate food to growing children.

How can a child possibly be well nourished, no matter what quantity or quality of the food, if it is mixed with a fetid, decaying mass of food from cavities in the teeth with its millions of germs of putrefaction and pus germs from abscessed teeth? This constant drain of poisons into the intestinal tract causes stomach and intestinal troubles. Bacterial products are absorbed into the system and produce fevers, eye-strain, headaches, anemia, malaise and constipation.

The poisons from the mouth are insidious and slow in their action. Many can, and do withstand them for years, if the powers of resistance are high, but in time these poisons are sure to destroy a good digestion and undermine the system.

A child cannot be expected to develop into a healthy adult with a strong mind if it is deprived of efficient means of chewing its food properly, or if the food must pass through an infected, uncared-for mouth. Is it any wonder that such children are sickly and lacking in strength? Is it any wonder that they are not bright and intelligent and many times figure in the mentally deficient classes in school?

Where, but in the unclean mouth is found the germs of spinal meningitis, measles, diphtheria, and scarlet fever, ready to set up their specific diseases as soon as the resistance is lowered? These unfortunates are also a menace to the health of other children because of their susceptibility to infectious disease.

Taking, then, this specific knowledge as to the deleterious effect of a diseased mouth and malnutrition upon the child, school, state and nation into consideration, it becomes a great sociological problem that should appeal to all of those interested in child welfare. The problem of nutrition will be solved within the first three inches of the alimentary canal.

MOTHER'S
COOK BOOK

KITCHEN SHORT CUTS

THERE are so many culinary operations needlessly repeated day after day in numberless homes, making gravies, mixing pastry for pies, cheese sticks and tarts, all at different times, when one process would make all three.

One of the daily tasks in most homes

Do YOU Know—

That the umbrella was described in the early dictionaries as "a portable penthouse to carry in a person's hand to screen them from violent rain or heat." In the Middle ages it was considered a mark of rank and honor much used in ceremonial processions. First used in the United States in Baltimore in 1772.

at the dinner hour is the making of gravies. The French word roux covers the base or thickening of gravies. There is white roux and brown which is simply white flour browned.

A hurriedly made sauce or gravy is apt to be served undercooked. By preparing the roux beforehand and keeping a surplus on hand, time is saved. For the white roux melt one-half cup of shortening in a heavy frying pan, add three-fourths of a cup of flour and cook slowly, stirring constantly until it is thoroughly blended and well cooked. Remove from the fire and store in a cool place until needed. For thickening soups, white sauce, creamed chicken or vegetables, use one to two tablespoons of the roux to each cup of liquid, according to the thickness desired.

To make brown roux, use the same proportions of fat and flour, but stir and cook until thick, smooth and brown, using care not to scorch. This, too, may be stored and used as thickening for meat gravies, mushroom sauce, stews and highly seasoned dishes.

A french dressing much liked and one which will keep two weeks in the ice chest is prepared as follows: Chop one small southern onion, two tablespoons each of red and green pepper, one tablespoon each of celery and parsley, a teaspoon of sugar and salt and cayenne to taste, with the vinegar and oil in proportion of one to three or four. Add two tablespoons of the piquant french dressing to the mayonnaise when serving. Hard-cooked eggs may be added, but should not be put into the dressing until ready to use.

"The Blue and the Gray" in Their "Bivouac of the Dead"

Monument to the Unknown Civil War Dead in Arlington Cemetery

Theodore O'Hara

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THIS is the story of two men—a Southerner and a Northerner. It is also the story of the two poems they wrote. It is a tale that can well be told as May 30 approaches. For that date is Memorial day.

On February 11, 1820, a son was born to Kane O'Hara, an Irish political refugee, who was living in Danville in the Bluegrass region of Kentucky. The boy was named Theodore O'Hara and when the war with Mexico began he was a captain in the United States army. By the time the war had ended, he came back to the Bluegrass as a major. There were other Kentuckians who came back also—to rest in the soil of their native state. When they were buried at Frankfort, Major O'Hara, standing on a grassy hillside in the midst of a great crowd, recited a poem which he had written in tribute to his fallen comrades. It was:

THE BIVOUAC OF THE DEAD

The muffled drum's sad roll has beat
The soldier's last tattoo;
No more on life's parade shall meet
That brave and fallen few.
On Fame's eternal camping-ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And Glory guards, with solemn round,
The bivouac of the dead.

No rumor of the foe's advance
Now swells upon the wind;
No troubled thought at midnight haunts
Of loved ones left behind;
No vision of the morrow's strife
The warrior's dream alarms;
No braying horn nor screaming file
At dawn shall call to arms.

Their shivered swords are red with rust,
Their plumed heads are bowed;
Their haughty banner, trailed in dust,
Is now their martial shroud.
And plenteous funeral tears have washed
The red stains from each brow,
And the proud forms, by battle gashed,
Are free from anguish now.

The neighing troop, the flashing blade,
The bugle's stirring blast,
The charge, the dreadful cannonade,
The din and shout are past;
Nor war's wild note, nor glory's peal,
Shall thrill with fierce delight
Those breasts that nevermore may feel
The rapture of the fight.

Like the fierce northern hurricane
That sweeps his great plateau,
Flushed with the triumph yet to gain
Came down the serried foe.
Who heard the thunder of the fray
Break o'er the field beneath,
Knew well the watchword of that day
Was "Victory or Death."

Long had the doubtful conflict raged
O'er all that stricken plain,
For never fiercer fight had waged
The vengeful blood of Spain;
And still the storm of battle blew,
Still swelled the gory tide;
Not long, our stout old chieftain knew,
Such odds his strength could bide.

'Twas in that hour his stern command
Called to a martyr's grave
The flower of his beloved land,
The nation's flag to save.
By rivers of their fathers' gore
His first-born laurels grew,
And well he deemed the sons would pour
Their lives for glory too.

Full many a norther's breath has swept O'er Angostura's plain—
And long the pitying sky has wept
Above the moldering slain.
The raven's scream, or eagle's flight,
Or shepherd's pensive lay,
Alone awakes each sullen height
That frowned o'er that dread fray.

Sons of the Dark and Bloody Ground,
Ye must not slumber there,
Where stranger steps and tongues resound
Along the heedless air.
Your own proud land's heroic soil
Shall be your fitter grave;
She claims from War his richest spoil—
The ashes of her brave.

Thus 'neath their parent turf they rest,
Far from the gory field,
Borne to a Spartan mother's breast
On many a bloody shield;
The sunshine of their native sky
Smiles sadly on them here,

Francis Miles Finch

And kindred eyes and hearts watch by
The heroes' sepulcher.

Rest on, embalmed and sainted dead,
Dear as the blood ye gave,
No impious footstep here shall tread
The herbage of your grave;
Nor shall your glory be forgot
While Fame her record keeps,
Or Honor points the hallowed spot
Where valor proudly sleeps.

Yon marble minstrel's voiceless stone
In deathless song shall tell
When many a vanquished age hath flown,
The story how ye fell.
Nor wreck, nor change, nor winter's blight,
Nor time's remorseless doom,
Shall dim one ray of glory's light
That gilds your deathless tomb.

When in the spring of 1861 the drums began beating the long roll again, O'Hara cast his lot with the South. He served until the end of the war, engaged in business at Columbus, Ga., then retired to a plantation in Alabama where he died June 7, 1867. In 1873 the Kentucky legislature voted an appropriation to bring the body of her soldier-poet back to the Bluegrass. The next year they buried him with military honors in Commonwealth cemetery in Frankfort. He rests there beside his fellow soldiers for whom he wrote the poem that has become world-famous and which has been called "the perfect requiem of four wars"—Theodore O'Hara's "The Bivouac of the Dead."

"Perfect requiem of four wars" though O'Hara's poem was, it remained for another to become more particularly associated with the Memorial day observance which grew out of the conflict of 1861-65.

In 1865, the women of Columbus, Ga., decorated the graves of their war dead and the following January the members of the Ladies' Aid society there decided to perpetuate the custom. They picked upon April 26, 1866, as the date for their Memorial day celebration.

So they held their memorial services in the cemetery on that date and decorated not only the graves of the Confederate war dead, but also those of some Union soldiers buried there.

The next spring there appeared in a New York newspaper a brief paragraph which stated that "the women of Columbus, Miss., have shown themselves impartial in their offerings made to the memory of the dead. They strewed flowers alike on the graves of the Confederate and of the National soldiers."

At that time a young man named Francis Miles Finch was practicing law in Ithaca, N. Y. Born in 1827, he had been graduated from Yale in 1849 and, as class poet, had delivered a memorable poem at the commencement exercises.

When he read the newspaper item about the action of the women in Columbus, Miss. Francis Miles Finch, the lawyer, became Francis Miles Finch, the poet, again, and in 1867 there appeared in the Atlantic Monthly this poem:

THE BLUE AND THE GRAY

By the flow of the inland river,
Whence the fleets of iron have fled,
Where the blades of the grave-grass quiver,
Asleep are the ranks of the dead;
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment-day;
Under the one, the Blue,
Under the other, the Gray.

These in the robings of glory,
Those in the gloom of defeat,
All with the battle-blood gory,
In the dusk of eternity meet;
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment-day;
Under the laurel, the Blue,
Under the willow, the Gray.

From the silence of sorrowful hours
The desolate mourners go,
Lovingly laden with flowers
Alike for the friend and the foe;
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment-day;
Under the roses, the Blue,
Under the lilies, the Gray.

So with an equal splendor,
The morning sun-rays fall,
With a touch impartially tender,
On the blossoms blooming for all;
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment-day;
Broidered with gold, the Blue,
Mellowed with gold, the Gray.

So, when the summer calleth,
On forest and field of grain,
With an equal murmur falleth
The cooling drip of the rain;
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment-day;
Wet with the rain, the Blue,
Wet with the rain, the Gray.

Sadly, but not with upbraiding,
The generous deed was done,
In the storm of the years that are fading
No braver battle was won:
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment-day;
Under the blossoms, the Blue,
Under the garlands, the Gray.

No more shall the war-cry sever,
Or the whining rivers be red;
They banish our anger forever
When they laurel the graves of our dead:
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment-day;
Love and tears for the Blue,
Tears and love for the Gray.

This poem became instantly popular. It was reprinted in hundreds of newspapers throughout the land. It was set to music and sung as a patriotic hymn. A famous anthology of American poetry calls it "a national classic."

In later years Finch became a justice of the New York Court of Appeals, helped organize Cornell university, was a member of its first board of trustees, became dean of its law school in 1892 and held other positions of honor and trust until his death in 1907. But America does not remember the famous jurist and educator nearly so well as it remembers the man whose poetic message of reconciliation helped reunite a nation and heal the wounds of a great war.

Lesson for May 26

THE LORD'S SUPPER

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 26:17-30; I Corinthians 11:23-29.

GOLDEN TEXT—This do in remembrance of me.—I Corinthians 11:24.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Supper Jesus Gave His Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Why We Have the Lord's Supper.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Observe the Lord's Supper?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Meaning of the Lord's Supper.

I. It Was Instituted by Christ (Matt. 26:17-30).

1. The time of (I Cor. 11:23). It was on the night of the betrayal of Jesus, just after the betrayer had been announced.

2. The circumstances of (Matt. 26:26). It was in connection with the eating of the Passover. At the command of Jesus the disciples had made ready the Passover, and while they were eating he took bread and blessed it and gave to the disciples.

3. The elements used (v. 26). Bread, doubtless common bread of the Passover feast, and the cup which was the fruit of the vine.

II. The Significance of the Lord's Supper (I Cor. 11:24-26; cf. Matt. 26:26-28).

Jesus took natural and literal elements and made them to be symbols of his own body and blood. Just as our bread and drink are transformed into brain and brawn, becoming integral parts of our bodies, so by means of these symbols the communicant partakes of Christ. We are in him and he is in us.

1. It is a memorial of the Lord (Luke 22:19). When he left the world he left the bread and the cup by which the disciples would remember him. Every true disciple will gladly avail himself of the opportunity thus to remember his Lord.

2. To show the Lord's sacrificial death (v. 26). Jesus Christ did not die as a hero or as an example of unselfish devotion, but as a substitutionary ransom. On the cross he made expiation for sin.

3. It is a guarantee that our sins are forgiven (Rom. 4:25).

"It was the signet of the Son of God attached to redemption."

4. It symbolizes the believer's reception of Christ (I Cor. 10:16). The communicant thereby participates in the body and blood of Christ, becoming a member of his body.

5. It is a forward look to a completed redemption (I Cor. 11:26). When faith is exercised in Christ, redemption begins and its completion will take place at the coming of Jesus Christ (I Thess. 4:16, 17). The bread and the cup constitute the keepsake of the Lord until he returns. These elements possess not only a spiritual, but a tremendous psychological value, both as a memorial and as a prospect.

III. Qualifications for Participation in the Lord's Supper (I Cor. 11:27-29).

1. A proper apprehension of its meaning (v. 27). Eating and drinking unworthily primarily refers not to the demerit of the communicant, but the failure to grasp the meaning and importance of the ordinance. To engage thoughtlessly in this service is to do it unworthily. Only a regenerated person can discern the Lord's body. Faith in the integrity of Christ's person and work is essential. Anyone who does not believe in the absolute deity of Christ and his vicarious atonement is an unworthy communicant.

2. Church membership (I Cor. 11:18-22). Christ's body is the Church, which is composed of regenerated men and women united to him as head and to each other as members of that body by the Holy Spirit.

3. Orderly walk. Conduct which disqualifies for participation in the Lord's supper is:

a. Immoral conduct (I Cor. 5:1-13). It is most perilous for one who is guilty of immorality to approach the Lord's table (I Cor. 11:30). Sickness and death are often visited upon such. This explains why some are mysteriously taken away in death.

b. Heresy (Tit. 3:16; I John 4:23). The one who does not believe in the deity and incarnation of Christ is a heretic. Such should be excluded from the Lord's table.

c. The one who stirs up party strife (Rom. 16:17). Those who cause divisions in the Church should also be excluded from the Lord's table.

Freedom and Triumph

To be gripped by an iron-handed necessity from without is slavery; to be borne along the path of duty by an inward force, which we would not resist if we could, is freedom, peace, triumph.

SEED THOUGHTS

Often it takes some tide of grief to lift us to our best.

Remember that every drop of rain that falls bears into the bosom of the earth a quality of beautiful fertility.—G. H. Lewes.

All things and all acts and this whole wonderful universe proclaim to us the Lord our Father, Christ our love, Christ our hope, our portion, and our joy.

RUSSIAN "JUSTICE"

Sherwood Eddy, who has visited Russia six times under the existing government, says that no profession is made in that country of settling disputes upon a basis of absolute or of abstract justice. If the offender is a poor worker he is given a light sentence, if he is an intelligent or privileged citizen who should have known better, he is given a heavier punishment, but if he is a member of the Communist party he is given the maximum penalty of the law.

What Is Truth?

By W. J. Geffert, Lutheran Minister

"If these shall hold their peace, the stones will cry out," was the reply of Jesus when the Pharisees asked him to rebuke the people for singing Hosanna, as he entered Jerusalem on Palm Sunday. Thus even today, when Christians refuse to testify to the truth of the Bible because "wise" men attack this truth, then the stones cry out in testimony thereof.

A favorite object of attack on the Bible has been the authorship of the books of Moses. Critics objected to Moses as a possible author because at that early time writing was not known. However, in 1887 a library of an early Egyptian king was discovered which proves that even before the time of Moses active writing was carried on throughout the Orient.

Thousands of clay tablets have been dug up at the famous city of Nineveh, confirming many passages of the Bible.

The Bible says that Babylonia was the oldest of all countries. Skeptics and unbelievers objected and claimed that distinction for Egypt. Some years ago M. J. de Morgan, the highest authority in Egyptian antiquities, testified that the Bible is correct in this matter.

Many other monuments clear away seeming inaccuracies of the Bible, showing that the Bible is what it claims to be: THE TRUTH. The stones uncovered by archaeologists are crying out and will continue to cry out in testimony of the Bible truths. Archibald Henry Sayce archaeologist and professor

State Indifferent on School Problem

The state of Illinois evidently is not much concerned about the welfare of its public school system but is chiefly interested in playing politics and letting the youth of the state get along without a means of education in many instances.

Bernice T. Van der Vries of Winnetka, representative of the seventh district, pointing to the lack of progress in solving the school problems says:

"School problems are making slow progress or no progress at all in the 59th session of the general assembly Bills appropriating funds due the state school distributive fund have been on the calendar of the house for two months after receiving recommendations for passages from the educational and appropriations committees.

"These bills if passed would ease the financial difficulties in many at Oxford writes: "The later history of the Old Testament no longer stands alone. Once it was the sole witness for the truth of the narrative it contains. . . . All is changed now. The earth has yielded up its secrets, the current civilization of Assyria has stepped forth again into the light of day and has furnished us with records, the authority of which none can deny. . . . Just at the moment when skeptical criticism seemed to have achieved its worst, and to have resolved the narratives of the Old Testament into myths or fables, God's providence was raising up from the grave of centuries a new and unimpeachable witness for their truth."

What other testimony have we with regard to THE TRUTH? We shall see.

school districts as budgets for the current year were based on the expectation that the state would pay the schools the amount due from the fund. I believe that these bills should be called for passage at the earliest possible time and should receive the vote of every member of the house.

"I believe that house bill 805 introduced by Rep. Edwards, is a forward step in necessary consolidation of schools. This bill has not yet had a hearing in the education committee.

"The bills introduced by Rep. Lotie Holman O'Neill which provides for a state distributive fund of $29,702,546 will have the support of all educational organizations. The present fund of $10,500,000 a year places Illinois far down in the list as measured by the support given to schools by other states.

"New York has a state distributive fund of $116,000,000 a year for its schools. The only way possible to give the children of Illinois the thorough and efficient system of free schools to which they are entitled by the constitution is to increase the state distributive fund. I expect to support these bills if and when they are brought before the house for passage."

Forgotten Children, a "Ghost" School and Distressing Poverty—Illinois

Snapshots taken at a "starved" school in Jackson county; note the open, old-oaken-bucket well and general collapse.

Windows boarded up, entire sashes gone, bleak and unpainted, holes in the foundation, holes in the walls, teachers unpaid for years—this is the condition of the school in Hallidayboro, Jackson county. One room has deteriorated until it is wholly uninhabitable.

Hallidayboro's school is typical of many of the "ghost schools" of Southern Illinois. It's a mining camp, the mine down much of the time, the people down-at-heart and whipped into a humbleness that is depressing. Boys and girls in school portray the helplessness of the situation.

Some of the girls, clad in worn and faded boy's overalls, scurried from sight when the cameraman appeared. The school has 123 pupils and three teachers. Assessed valuation is $182,803. The tax rate, for schools, by special vote $2, should mean a school income of $3,650 a year or $19.08 per child.

But because of poverty and starving conditions only about $800 was collected last year. Bond requirements are $4,720 a year; teachers' orders have increased to $6,560 outstanding, increasing, and not being paid. It would require 16 times the tax collections last year to pay the debts already due.

Hallidayboro asked for $1,501.82 state aid for its schools last year. It got "only some of it" because the state is delinquent in giving all schools in Illinois what it owes them.

COSTLY TO NEGLECT COWS ON PASTURE, WARNS ARENDS

If any man who milks cows were to stand out in front of his place day after day and throw away dollar bills, he would soon be seized and held for observation. Crazy as that sounds, it's no more unreasonable than the deliberate practice of throwing away costly cow flesh every year—as many a sane, intelligent cow owner persists in doing when pastures come in, according to W. R. Arends, noted dairy advisor and staff member of the Purina Mills dairy department.

"There's nothing like fresh green grass," Arends says, "to stimulate milk flow. And there's nothing like grass to 'shoot the middle' out of good cows when nothing else is fed with it. The man who turns his cows out on pasture, no matter how good it is, to let them get what they can out of it, may think he's making cheap milk on grass alone. But he's not—he's making that milk with grass plus cow flesh—a most expensive way of doing the job."

"That's not just one man's opinion. It is the voice of time-tested experience, the proven record of long scientific research. To quote one of many statements from Henry and Morrison, America's leading publication on Feeds and Feeding:

"The proper feeding of milk cows on pasture is much simpler than during the winter," says Henry and Morrison, "and doubtless this is the reason that so many farmers, busy with their crops, fail to give their herd the necessary attention in summer. Often the cows are merely turned to pasture after milking at night and in the morning with no further thought as to the supply of feed actually available for them. It is then no wonder that when the pasturage becomes scanty in mid-summer, the cows run down in flesh and fall off severely in yield of milk. Even if fed liberally when barn feeding starts in the fall, quite commonly they cannot then be brought back to their usual production."

Neglect Is Costly

"From the time cows go on pasture they should be fed a supplementary ration," says Arends. "For grass, no matter how good it is, takes more from the cow than it puts back into her system. Its juicy green freshness and succulence at first stimulate the cow to pour out the milk in more than normal abundance. Since grass, which is 80% water, cannot furnish all the milk-making materials for the extra heavy production it causes, the cow naturally is forced to draw on her own body to make up the deficiency. This continued withdrawal and lack of sufficient replacement material leads to the inevitable milk slump and falling off in body weight which comes later in the season—a condition which is hastened along faster by the natural decline in available pasture. When these things happen the man behind the cows discovers that the feed cost of rebuilding flesh and milk yield runs into way more money than he would have had to spend to keep the cows on a balanced, body-sustaining, supplementary ration right from the start."

"A feed to be effective in holding up milk and body weight through spring and summer must obviously be reinforced in mineral to keep a cow from drawing on her body for calcium caused by heavy milking stimulated by green pasture. It must also be highly concentrated to insure a cow getting plenty of nutrients, even in small quantities, since cows do not take readily to grain with succulent pasture available. A third requirement for such a feed is the proper blending of its ingredients to counteract the laxative condition of pasture for better health and fitness of the cows. And it is equally essential that the cost of feeding should be reasonable."

"All of these requirements are to be found in Body Cow Chow, a pasture supplement measuring fully up to these essentials and introduced last spring to the dairy world. Developed only after much research and experimentation, Body Cow Chow was accepted enthusiastically by dairymen, both large and small. Its ability to hold up flesh and hold up production was verified over and over again before the end of the pasture season."

Rose Lost $569 Per Second Last May 30

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Mauri Rose finished 27 seconds behind the 500-mile race winner last year and each one of those precious moments cost him exactly $569.44 per second. The pay-off from the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and accessory and lap prizes to Wild Bill Cummings, the winner, was $29,725 exclusive of future money-earning capacity and Rose got $14,350 for second place, a difference of $15,350.

It was the closest finish in the history of the Speedway and Rose is back this May 30 with a new car—a faster one, he says, and he hopes the score will be different.

He will pilot the Four-Wheel-Drive Special with which Frank Brisko showed the way for 70 laps in last year's race.

"No one can be sure he is going to win," Rose says, "but I know I can hit the turns faster, maintain higher speed, use less gas and rubber in the Four-Wheel drive than I could in the rear wheel drive I had a year ago. With this added advantage, I hope to maintain a better average speed for the 500 miles."

Mauri thinks, too, that a majority of the field in the annual Decoration Day race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway will be faster this year, too, and that it is likely Bill Cummings' winning speed record will be broken.

Richard Arlen May Ride In Auto Race

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—A handsome adonis of the screen with a rough and ready disposition may ride the bricks in the annual 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway here May 30.

He is Richard Arlen, star of the movies and an expert on combustion motors in his own right.

Arlen has made a bid to ride as mechanic with his good friend Peter De Paolo, winner in 1925, who is attempting a come-back this year. DePaolo has accepted the application and Arlen must now pass muster before the A. A. A. Contest Board and receive permission from his studios.

Regardless of whether he rides or not, Arlen will be a member of the De Paolo pit crew and not for picture purposes because he is capable of jerking out a spark plug and analyzing the motor condition as well as any other member of Pete's mechanical family.

Shack That Housed Two "Unpaid" School Teachers Two Full Years

Two men teachers, getting uncashable "orders" for their salary pay, lived in this decrepit building in Dowell, Jackson County, Ill., two years.

"Please don't use my name," pleaded the principal of the elementary school in Dowell, Jackson county, Ill., when this picture was taken. "I have friends in other parts of the state and I'm ashamed."

This principal, an efficient young schoolmaster, who lived in this shack with another teacher two years, said he would have to stay in Dowell during his vacation this summer, adding, "I have no money and can't get out."

One man teacher in the school recently managed to buy a new suit of clothes with a "school order." Then he sold the suit because he had to have money.

But things are getting better. The men are out of the shack this year. One of them is boarding with a girl school teacher's mother. He added:

"She gives me room and board for 'orders.' I pay her $34 a month. She manages to cash the orders for groceries. So we're getting along." Two teachers in Dowell are getting $70 a month and two $60 a month "in orders." The orders have to be held about four years.

A mine has been giving the school waste "coal dust" to keep the building warm. Someone has to go to the mine and get it as the mine doesn't deliver the gift coal. There are 251 pupils and six teachers in Dowell; salaries have been cut 61½ per cent in four years.

Teachers' orders outstanding total more than $10,800; warrants outstanding, $8,800; tax collections, 1933, were $6,877. Bond requirements, due this year, are $2,470.

When teachers were hired for the year they were asked:

"Can you finance yourself one full year without pay?" Orders have been unpaid since April, 1931. One girl teacher got some silk stockings recently. Her parents gave them to her.

Former Winners Have Chance to Set New Track Records With Victories In 1935

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — At least three former winners, two of whom may make track history, will start in the 23rd running of the annual 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway here on May 30.

Wild Bill Cummings who won a dashing victory last year by 27 seconds, may become the only driver to win two races in succession. Despite the heavy odds against repeating, he will be a popular favorite.

Louis Meyer, who won in 1928 and 1933 to share the two-time winner throne with the famous Tommy Milton, may become the only pilot to win three races. He came to the track with a new car last year with little chance to break it in and this year is a capable threat.

Fred Frame, who won in 1932, will again have three shots at victory, driving one of the trio himself. One of the most prolific racers in the business, competing two or three times a week the year around, Frame will bring short odds from the bettors.

Whiskers Will Flow Until He Wins Race

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — George "Doc" MacKenzie may be eligible for the baseball nine of the House of David before he wins a 500-mile race.

The Edington, Pa., flash has determined to let his whiskers grow in a Van Dyke beard until he captures the big prize of automobile competition and his whiskers will float in the summer breeze as he speeds about the Indianapolis Motor Speedway here on May 30.

MacKenzie has not fared so well in his starts in the big-time although he has been a worthy contender about the dirt tracks. He had a feature Californian race in his pocket until he ran out of gas a short distance from his goal but recently led a good field to victory at Reading, Pa.

Much in his favor, MacKenzie will have a capable car this year entered by Gil Pirrung of St. Louis, Mo.

Coast Drivers are Sure To Have Duel

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Two "firecrackers" from the far west will put on a little race among themselves during the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30.

For it won't make any difference in what spot either Al Gordon or Kelly Petillo may be running in the big event, they are certain to stage their own little contest all by themselves. Neither will stand for the other passing him.

Petillo shot his red charger about the 25-mile qualifying test at nearly 120 miles an hour last year to win the pole position and is back this year with a new car. Gordon also has a faster machine and the pair are certain to stage an interesting duel.

STRIKERS THREATEN NORMANDIE'S SAILING

Harve, France—With the sailing of the 79,000 ton Normandie, largest steamship in the world, in the balance, with American and British competitors steaming out of the harbor with passengers already booked on the French liners Champlain and Lafayette, 2000 strikers brought despair to the heads of French shipping interests. The men demanded old-age pensions, 15-day vacations and yearly pay including time in port. The Government, which pays the French Line a subsidy of $10,000,000 a year, wanted to see the Normandie arrive at New York on schedule. Large sums have been spent in advertising the event; finally the 1300 sailors necessary to man her and their co-workers went back to work, after pleading of Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin.

AUTO PLANTS REOPENING

By the end of the week, 20 automobile plants will have reopened, putting 30,000 men back to work, thus ending the 3-week's strike at Chevrolet's Toledo transmission factory, with sympathetic walk-outs at Norwood, Ohio and Atlanta. Short as it was in duration, this strike staggered the Automotive Industry at its healthiest moment in five years. It dragged Chevrolet production from 28,700 a week down to 10,000; delivery fell behind 55,000 cars; the company lost $6,000,000 in revenue, the men $2,000,000 in wages. In settlement the company grants a minimum wage increase of 4 cents an hour instead of the 20 cents asked for; refused formal union recognition.

JUST A YEAR OLD

In a week the Dionne Quintuplets celebrate their first birthday. Never have children of a year received more attention, more publicity, more paternal governmental "mothering" than the five little girls who brought surprise to their parents, consternation to Doctor Dafoe and fame to this little Canadian village. Elaborate plans are being made to broadcast the event; presents are arriving from all over the world; the town itself is in gala attire for the biggest celebration of its existence.

TYPE OF DRESS ALWAYS CORRECT

2029

Here is a dress with real character. Its nice simple lines are made interesting by an original jabot, cut in one with the soft shoulders. Gathers relieve any tendency toward severity while vertical seams, released into pleats below the knees, define the skirt and give an illusion of slenderness. It's the type of dress you can wear and wear—every place. So, for a smart spring season, select a matelasse crepe—or one with definite surface interest, of which the shops are full—and choose a lovely new color. Gray and beige are important now, as are navy blues and shades of brown. Sleeves may be made long.

Pattern 2029 is available in sizes 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 4 1/4 yards 39-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address, and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, "Penelope," in an effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. At a baseball game a ball strikes ten-year-old Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for her when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young psychiatrist, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal, and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is also won over. Nance's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Nance escapes, although shot, and goes to Lanny's apartment, from which, by McNamara's orders, she is removed to the chief's home. From one of the men in the boat on which the girl escaped McNamara learns that Nance's real name is Penelope Gatlin. He also discovers that she is heiress to $750,000. Fearful of McNamara, in his official capacity, Nance flees. Lanny finds her in her apartment, sound asleep. Several days later her partially restored memory leads her to tell Lanny of her wealthy father, Theodore Gatlin, and of her girlhood in France.

"Quit that," Lanny commanded in her most ferocious manner. "If I hadn't found you lovable I wouldn't have you in my house this minute. I'd turn you over to Flynn and Angellotti. By the way," she continued, "how did you get that sock on the beazer?"

"Father took me to a baseball game and a long drive flew into the bleachers and struck me on the nose. Lanny, you mustn't use slang. It isn't polite."

"I wrap myself around a highball when I'm tired or want to be sociable, and I smoke cigarettes," Lanny protested. "I suppose a perfect lady wouldn't do those things, either?"

"A perfect lady may without marring her perfection, old fuss-budget. That's a matter of personal liberty, and only becomes distressing when carried to excess. But there's no excuse for a highly intelligent and cultured woman to employ the language of the streets."

"I have my human moments," Lanny excused herself meekly.

"I'll set the table in the dining room. Won't you order some flowers? And Lanny—I'll do something for you some day."

"For instance?"

"Well, have you ever been to Europe?"

"Certainly not."

"Then I'll take you."

"I accept the nomination. In return I'll do something else for you. I'll have that nose of yours split open, the shattered bone of the bridge scraped out and a cute little piece of pliable cartilage whittled off one of your spare ribs, and grafted into your funny nose to form a new bridge. Then the doctor will sew your nose together again over it—"

"What's the difference between having a nose like a Pekinese and a makeshift with a big scar on it, I'd like to know?"

"Oh, there won't be any scar, dearie. The surgeon will cut a strip of epidermis off your forehead and without detaching it from your forehead, bring the flap down, drape it over your new scarred nose and graft it there. It will grow and cover the scar, and when everything's lovely, that skin connection with your forehead will be severed and the ragged edges trimmed and presently nature will do the rest. Six months after the operation I'll defy anybody but an expert to discover you've got a custom-made nose."

The girl's eyes shone. "Is it true, Lanny, is it true? It's so hard to believe in miracles."

"Science pulls 'em off daily, my dear."

Nance changed the subject. "Here, here, we're gabbling like a pair of geese. The linen, woman, where's the linen? Off with your hat and coat. While you're getting it I'll run upstairs and get your mules."

"After dinner I must do some more pumping," thought Lanny. "The information will be invaluable to Stephen. Strange case! Total amnesia sometimes, only partial amnesia at others. Dreadful mixture."

When Dan McNamara came home about midnight from the regular weekly meeting of the police commission, he found his ex-convict guest up and waiting for him. "I had two burglars here tonight, about ten o'clock, Chief," he announced.

The chief sat down and loaded his pipe. "I was expecting them, my boy. Did they ask you any questions?"

"No. They just searched the house. I don't think they touched anything except the lipstick on the bureau over there," he said.

"Did they take the lipstick?" Dan asked.

"They didn't take it, they looked at it," McNamara sighed. The case was getting a little thick for him when it became complicated with lipsticks. He went to the telephone and got Stephen Burt out of bed.

"Did a certain party, while a guest at my house, ask you to bring out a lipstick when you called in the course of your professional duties, Doctor?"

"Oh, yes."

"Thanks. Goodnight." McNamara hung up and went to the room lately occupied by Nance Belden. On the bureau he found a lipstick. "Vanity is always the undoing of a crook," he sighed and went to bed, greatly troubled in his mind at what was, to him, indubitable knowledge that Flynn and Angellotti, even though they had failed to find their quarry, must be convinced, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that he had harbored an escaped convict in his home.

He passed a sleepless night, but he did some solid thinking, so there was no lost time. He had hoped, by providing this sick convict as an excuse for Doctor Burt's nightly visits, to throw Flynn and Angellotti off the scent—and now the scent was hotter than ever.

"Now, what will they do? They're morally certain she went to Lanny's house the night she escaped and that Lanny got her out of there in the nick of time and took her here. Now that she's escaped them here they may suspect she's doubled back to Lanny's house. Murderation! However, those two dicks will never bother her without fortifying themselves with a search warrant. They'd be too afraid of me. But with a search warrant and the girl to show for their pains they'll have me foul. I couldn't open my mouth—if they bring the girl into headquarters I'll have to give them a cheer and congratulate them."

He decided Flynn and Angellotti would sleep on their evidence and the suspicions it had aroused, compare notes in the morning and decide upon a course of action. They would have to adduce some nominal evidence to support their suspicion before the district attorney would consent to issue the search warrant, for a search warrant is not issued lightly. In the morning they would induce some stool-pigeon to tell the district attorney that he had seen Nance Belden's face at the window of Lanny's home. Possibly they might induce the patrolman on that beat to stretch the truth a little.

"Science Pulls 'Em Off Daily, My Dear."

"I can't get Nance out of Lanny's house tonight and I can't get her out in daylight tomorrow, but I must get her out tomorrow night," he decided. "But how?"

He was at his office at eight next morning. At eight-thirty he looked into the detectives' room and saw Flynn and Angellotti in profound conference. Half an hour later he stepped out of a taxi two blocks from Lanny's house, and when the cab had disappeared, he made his way to the house and was admitted by Lanny.

"Nance has got to make a clean getaway," he assured her earnestly, "because tonight Flynn and his pal may come with a search warrant. The district attorney will probably call me up before he issues it and I'll have to tell him to go ahead and issue it, in order to allay suspicion. Now, here are half a dozen harmless hand grenades that burst on impact. Three of them are tear gas bombs and three are stink bombs."

"Now, I'll tell you exactly how they'll make the pinch. They'll not come during the day, because they'll know you aren't at home and that Nance wouldn't answer that bell anyhow. But tonight, one of them will ring the front doorbell and shove the search warrant under your nose and step inside. The other will, in the meantime, have gone around to your back door to prevent the girl's escape in that direction. There's a cement floor around your kitchen door, is there not?"

"Yes. Well, when the doorbell rings, you answer it. That will be Nance's tip to peek out the second story window and lob three bombs down on the cement beside whoever she sees standing there. They explode with a sound like a gunshot and diffuse their gas almost instantly over a considerable area. Now, whichever one goes to the back door will never be expecting a citizen to shower this sort of bomb down on him, because they are not accessible to citizens; so he will think they're electric light bulbs tossed down to scare him away. By the way, have Nance toss one electric light bulb down first and then follow with two tear bombs—here, I'll make a mark with my pencil on the tear bombs. Before he realizes what has happened he'll be weeping like Niobe and unable to see anything in the darkness."

"But bear this in mind, Lanny. He'll not desert his post. He'll hug the back door and be ready to grab her when she comes. He'll stick it out. That's the time Nance must drop a stink bomb beside him."

"Meanwhile the man in front will hear the explosions. If the one in back cries out, the one in front will figure he has been shot and will run to the back door to help him. As he opens the back door his pal will grab him. You must follow at his heels and shut and bolt the door instantly, or you'll get yours, too. There will be a momentary struggle between Flynn and Angellotti in the dark because the front door man will think he has the scoundrel that hurled the bombs; and by the time they discover each other's identity, the front door man will be as sightless and ill as the back door man."

"Nance, a word to you now."

"My name is Penelope Gatlin, Dan."

"My error. Penelope, the instant you drop those first two bombs, shut down the window. And, remember, all the lights in the rear of the house and particularly in the kitchen must be turned off. When the front door man is struggling with his pal and Lanny has closed the door, her scream will be your cue to open the window again, just long enough to pay the rest of your eggs on the scrimmage. You must be dressed for the street and have some money in your pocket. Got any?"

"No."

"Here's two hundred."

"I'll send you my check. Thanks." And she took the money.

"Immediately after tossing the last of the bombs, close the window and beat it downstairs and out the front door. I'll leave a coupe, with the motor running, parked at the curb across the street. Can you drive?"

"I can drive, Dan."

"Very well, then. Climb into the car and beat it."

"Beat it where?"

"Los Angeles, San Diego, anywhere. Keep on going, and when you get there, send me a wire to the central station merely giving your address. Then lay low until somebody comes after you. Keep off the street. Lanny, you must disguise her nose. Clamp a wadding of cotton and a neat dressing over it to hide the dish in it. Any lady is liable to have an injury to her nose and wear a dressing on it. Now, is everything understood?"

Nance nodded, and Lanny's silence gave consent. "You'll probably get a whiff of what's good for Flynn and Angellotti," McNamara advised Lanny, "but you'll get over it. When you lob over the last of your rotten eggs, Penelope, do not breathe, and close your eyes tightly until you have closed the window again. Then—out of the house like a shot. This plan of mine is fool-proof if followed absolutely, but it's your for San Quentin again if it isn't, my brave lassie, and all the chiefs of police in town cannot help you then."

CHAPTER VIII

"Thank you, sir," said Nance politely and with quiet dignity. "You are most kind to take this trouble for a stranger, and I shall never forget it." And she held out her hand.

McNamara looked in puzzlement at Lanny. "What's happened to her?" he demanded.

"I'll explain to you some time. You're a brilliant chief of police and you've figured everything out to a goat's eyelash for Penelope, but what's going to happen to me?"

"The concoction of the plan I've just outlined has given me brain fag, Lanny. It's cost me a night's sleep. I don't know what's going to happen to you and I don't care much. You're a smart woman, and if you can't figure a way out of your end of the mess don't call on me for help."

"I wish I could relish that compliment," Lanny retorted dryly. "However, if you think I'm not going to laugh myself sick over this you're a poor judge of women. Good-by, you old crook, and God bless you. Kiss him, Penelope."

A becoming modesty caused the girl to hesitate just a little, then she came to the chief and implanted a most ladylike kiss on his blue jowl. "You're very kind, Mr. McNamara," she assured him again.

"Cripes," he muttered and went off. Dan McNamara's estimate of the ability of Detective Sergeants Flynn and Angellotti did them no injustice; indeed, they proved even smarter than their chief credited them with being. Angellotti's adventure with Dan McNamara they passed over as an unavoidable accident; Angellotti was certain McNamara had not recognized him. He felt certain McNamara had no suspicion that his house was under surveillance, although Flynn had mental reservations on that point, for the Irish are a psychic race.

After watching Doctor Burt enter and leave the chief's house on Thursday night, when they knew the chief would not be home until midnight, they decided to investigate. The unlocked cellar door gave them pause; Flynn whispered that he was always suspicious of things that came too easy. They crept upstairs and found Dan McNamara's ex-convict guest reading in bed. Both detectives recognized him, so while Angellotti guarded him Flynn made a hurried but thorough search of the premises. They were not in the house more than five minutes.

Thankless Jobs Given to Women?

Sex Over-Willing to Take Such Positions, Writer Thinks.

"Did you see this in the paper about a woman getting the job of mayor of a South American city—a job that was too tough for men?"

"It's about time for recognition of the fact that there are some things women can do better than men. Certain peculiarly feminine abilities qualify women better than men to cope with certain types of problems."

Comment made by a woman writer, to whose attention this incident was called, is not altogether flattering to her sex. She remarks:

"It would be nice to be able to agree with our reader that the interior ministry of Chili appointed a woman to be mayor of the town of Calera because of 'peculiarly feminine abilities' which especially fitted her for work which men found too difficult. But it strikes me as far more likely that no man wanted the job."

"Judging by the news clipping which speaks of the various factions which the mayor must keep appeased, it would seem that being mayor of Calera is one of those thankless jobs. Women are used to thankless jobs, and gravitate to them as the moth to the flame."

"And it seems that financially there's very little in the job. With some exceptions, of course, that's the first thing that men want to know—What's in it? They've had to ask that, because men have families to support. But women are used to taking jobs with nothing in them, just for some silly idea that they can do some good."

"And, last but not least, about being mayor of Calera, it looks like a job without much action or fireworks or glory. The work requires less dramatic qualities than the power and willingness of conciliation and self-effacement and patience. Almost any wife and mother, of course, is an expert along those lines.

"No, dear reader, happy as I am at all times to pin a feather in women's hats, my guess would be that it's not because the male politicians of that little city were too weak or incompetent to hold down the job that it was given to a woman—but because no man wanted it. That's why she's the man for the job."

MARK TWAIN'S PHILOSOPHY

If I had been living in the beginning of things I should have looked around the township to see what popular opinion thought of the murder of Abel before I publicly condemned Cain. I should have had my private opinion, of course, but I shouldn't have expressed it until I had felt the way.—Mark Twain.

Laws Protect Cactus

The cactus has gained such favor for indoor and western garden use that several southwestern states have passed laws to prevent wholesale removal of desert plants.

Makes Cars Beautiful..to Stay!

There are no two ways about it! If you want your car to stay beautiful—that is, sparkling like new year in and year out, it must be Simonized. Perhaps the finish is already dull. Then first use the new improved Simoniz Kleener. It quickly restores the lustre. Simoniz, too, is easy to apply but it's hard for weather to wear off. Besides protecting the finish as nothing else will, Simoniz makes it last longer. So always insist on Simoniz and Simoniz Kleener for your car.

54% MORE TREAD RUBBER IN NEW GROUND GRIP TRACTOR TIRE TO GIVE GREATEST TRACTION FOR EVERY FARM NEED

IF YOU are using a tractor with steel lug wheels, change over now to Firestone Ground Grip Tires. If you are ordering new equipment, specify Firestone Ground Grip Tires on your new tractor.

Look at this amazing Super Traction Low Pressure Tire illustrated at the right, and read the many advantages over steel lug wheels.

Firestone has constantly been the pioneer and leader in the development of balloon tires for farm equipment, and today 54% more rubber is used in the deeper, wider, flatter, self-cleaning tread, with higher, more rugged shoulders.

This thicker tread is held securely to the tire body because of the patented Firestone construction feature of two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords directly under the tread. This binds the Gum-Dipped cord body and the more rugged tread together in one inseparable unit.

Call on the nearest Firestone Service Store, Firestone Tire Dealer or Implement Dealer today. Find out about the easy payment plan for equipping your tractor, truck or car with these new Ground Grip Tires that give you Super Traction for every farm need.

Remember! This heavy, Super-Traction tread is guaranteed not to loosen from the tire body under any conditions, and all other parts of the tire are fully guaranteed to give satisfaction.

plants here at home. Plants are started in the hot bed and then transplanted and grown in special individual bands filled with balanced plant food. When danger of frost is past, place plant, dirt and band in the ground and it will produce much earlier than usual. No transplanting, no exposed roots, no set back. The bands will tend to protect the plants from cut worms and will rot away during the season.
Best varieties of tomato, cabbage,
cauliflower, pepper, celery, pimento, celery cabbage, broccoli, sage and head lettuce. Prices very reasonable.

Club Closes Very Successful Year

the traits of characters possessed by Mrs. Nielsen as portrayed in the pansies; also saying that each pansy face represented each of her club members.

Mrs. Nielsen responded graciously and then in turn presented to Mrs.
Combs, as a gift from the Club, an arm bouquet of roses and yellow snap dragons, who also responded and accepted them gratefully.

The following guests were presented: Mrs. Fred Waterman of Chicago, president of the third district at the time the Tinley Park club was organized; Mrs. Touhey, of Homewood, 2nd vice president of the district; Mrs. Wm. H. Walker,
State Literature chairman; Mrs.
Schmidt president of the Homewood club; Mrs. McCall president of Midlothian club and past president, Mrs.
Clare Moore; Mrs. Hickey, president of Forest Ridge club; Mrs. Ella Loebe, president of Orland Park club; and Mrs. Wineberger president of Crestwood club. Each officer of the Tinley Park club was then presented and then the meeting was turned over to Mrs. O. Ebenhack, chairman of the Conservation department who presented the following program.

Mrs. Combs spoke briefly of the club work.
Mrs. Edgar Graves of Orland Park, third district chairman of the Conservation department, spoke of the work club women are trying to do in getting our state legislature to pass a law, proclaiming this year a closed year on shooting of game birds, saying that at the rate the hunters are multiplying, it will be but a few years until our country does not have any more water fowl.
Some variety are even now exterminated and can never be produced again.

Mrs. Lucille Noehring of Chicago accompanied by Mrs. Marion Murphy of Chicago, sang, "Morning" and "Optimism." Mrs. Trudie Swisher read a poem which she had written entitled, "Song In My Heart".
Mr. Erickson again played another selection on the piano.

The club Dean, Mrs. Frank Bal-win then presented to Mrs. Nielsen, as a gift from the club members, a large bottle of cologne.

After the adjournment, upon the invitation of Mrs. F. J. Kruska, the group walked over to her beautiful home and there enjoyed roaming thru the ten acres of lovely gardens and walks, and then thru her spacious home. Mrs. Kruska, with her husband, Dr. F. J. Kruska, are collectors of unusual furniture. We marveled at the room filled with gilt-ed furniture, at the dining room with the rare and beautifully craved chairs and buffet. This lovely home contains fifteen rooms. It was a joy to wander thru it. Mrs. Kruska was a lovely hostess.

Thus ended a joyful day, with the sun shining in our hearts as well as in the sky, which in the beginning promised not to be so fine when the rain descended, but which gave way finally to the sun.
